EARTHWORMS

Catch the Vision — Take hold of the Principle

Throughout the ages in the past the earthworm has been a master builder of top-soil. Each worm is a miniature mill for the production of top-soil. You ask, "Can I build top-soil?" The answer is "Yes." You ask "How?" The answer is "Feed earthworms." "What?" All the biological end products of life, kitchen and farm waste, dead vegetation, manures, dead animal residues— anything that ever lived and died—constitute the abundant cheap source of earthworm feed, waiting to be utilized in a profitable manner, through the intensive culture of domesticated red earthworms, Helodrilus Foetidus, the only one in 2,000 classified that will domesticate and stay at home to raise huge families — Come and see for yourself what the use of these domesticated red earthworms are doing for beautiful trees loaded with fruit that were given up for the woodpile.
